

Let me be myself

The higher I climb, the further I drop, the faster I run, the quicker I'm stopped.
When I think the things are goin' right I am held to stand in the rainy night.
The more words I've said, more I've been misunderstood. The silence around me unrest rises up.
With open eyes I make myself face the truth, oh let me live without your lying excuse.

Let me be, let me be myself. Before I live a lie, really I'd rather die, Let me be me.

The more I hide, the hold on my life slips. Pleasures of today erased through tomorrow's tight grip.
The others are the Kings and I'm the fool, the fool who's breaking all the rules.
More wishes I reject, the more is the demand. My best mood always soured, lost in the sand.
I'll never give up I'll face the facts, why should I live with the hate and attacks?

Let me be, let me be, let me be myself, let me be.
Let me be, let me be myself. Before I live a lie, really I'd rather die, Let me be me.

Spoken words made of trust, burning bridges between us.
Dreams of fortune in the dust, forgotten dreams full of lust.

Let me be, let me be, let me be myself, let me be.
Let me be, let me be myself. Before I live a lie, really I'd rather die, Let me be me.